

THE OVERWHELMED MOM'S SELF-CARE GUIDE

Practical Ways to Recharge Without Guilt

Daniel Tesfamariam

THE OVERWHELMED MOM'S SELF-CARE GUIDE

Author: Daniel Tesfamariam

Format: 8.5 x 11 inches | Kindle & Paperback

All rights reserved.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Chapter 1: Why Mom Guilt Is a Lie

Chapter 2: 5-Minute Self-Care (Realistic)

Chapter 3: Physical Self-Care When Exhausted

Chapter 4: Emotional Self-Care (Feeling Your Feelings)

Chapter 5: Social Self-Care (Friendship Maintenance)

Chapter 6: Spiritual Self-Care

Chapter 7: Setting Boundaries With Family

Chapter 8: Asking for Help (Scripts Included)

Chapter 9: Couples Time After Kids

Chapter 10: Career Identity Beyond Motherhood

Chapter 11: Managing Rage / Touched Out

Chapter 12: Sleep When You Can't Sleep

Chapter 13: Seasonal Self-Care

Chapter 14: Self-Care on a Budget

Chapter 15: Your Personalized Self-Care Plan

WHY MOM GUILT IS A LIE

REAL MOM STORY

Sarah had not taken a bath alone in three years. Every time she tried, guilt crept in: she should be reading to the kids, cleaning, or being productive. Then one day she collapsed from exhaustion at the grocery store. Her doctor said: 'You cannot pour from an empty cup.' That day changed everything.

THE LESSON

Mom guilt is a cultural myth that tells you that being a good mother means completely erasing yourself. This is not only untrue, it is harmful to you AND your children.

Children learn self-care by watching their mothers practice it. When you take care of yourself, you are teaching your kids that their needs matter too. You are modeling healthy boundaries.

The lie of mom guilt says: good mothers sacrifice everything. The truth says: good mothers know that their wellbeing directly impacts their children's wellbeing. A depleted mom cannot show up fully.

Permission slip: You are allowed to rest. You are allowed to have hobbies. You are allowed to say 'not right now.' You are allowed to close the bathroom door. You are a person, not just a role.

Why Mom Guilt Is a Lie - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Name three things you gave up 'for the kids' that you actually miss
2. Write yourself a permission slip and put it on your mirror
3. Challenge the guilt: would you feel guilty if your partner took time for himself?

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What would you do with one guilt-free hour? Write it down and then DO IT this week.

Why Mom Guilt Is a Lie - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

5-MINUTE SELF-CARE (REALISTIC)

REAL MOM STORY

Jenny laughed when someone suggested self-care. 'I don't even have time to pee alone,' she said. But then she discovered that self-care does not have to mean spa days and weekend retreats. Some of the most powerful self-care takes just five minutes or less.

THE LESSON

Five-minute self-care is not lesser self-care. It is REALISTIC self-care for this season of life. Stop waiting for the perfect two-hour block that never comes.

5-minute body care: stretch in the shower, do 10 deep breaths while coffee brews, apply lotion mindfully after washing hands, dance to one song, drink a full glass of water slowly.

5-minute mind care: step outside and feel sunshine for 60 seconds, write three gratitudes, listen to a favorite song with eyes closed, send a voice memo to a friend, read one poem.

5-minute soul care: pray or meditate while kids nap, light a candle while doing dishes (makes it feel intentional), say three affirmations in the mirror, sit in your car for two minutes of silence before going inside after work.

5-Minute Self-Care (Realistic) - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Set 3 alarms on your phone labeled 'breathe' at random times today
2. Choose one 5-minute practice and do it EVERY day for one week
3. Identify your worst time of day and schedule 5 minutes of care before it

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

When do you feel most depleted? What tiny act of self-care could you insert just before that moment?

5-Minute Self-Care (Realistic) - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

PHYSICAL SELF-CARE WHEN EXHAUSTED

REAL MOM STORY

Maria was so tired she could not remember the last time she felt rested. Her body ached. Her back hurt from carrying babies. Her energy was at zero. She thought physical self-care meant going to the gym, which felt impossible. Then she learned that physical self-care starts much simpler.

THE LESSON

Physical self-care when exhausted is about the basics: sleep, hydration, nutrition, movement, and touch. When you are depleted, start at the foundation.

Sleep: If you cannot get more hours, improve quality. Black-out curtains, no phone 30 minutes before bed, cooler room temperature, and a consistent bedtime make a real difference.

Hydration: Most moms are chronically dehydrated. Keep a large water bottle in every room. Set a goal of finishing one by noon. Dehydration worsens fatigue, headaches, and irritability.

Movement: Forget hour-long workouts. Walk around the block while kids are in the stroller. Do squats while waiting for the microwave. Stretch during naptime. Even 10 minutes counts.

Touch: When was the last time someone touched you without needing something? Ask your partner for a 2-minute shoulder rub. Get a massage if possible. Physical touch reduces cortisol.

Physical Self-Care When Exhausted - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Drink one extra glass of water today (just one, start small)
2. Go to bed 20 minutes earlier tonight - no phone in bed
3. Do gentle stretches for 5 minutes right now while reading this

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What is your body trying to tell you right now? Listen without judgment and write what it needs.

Physical Self-Care When Exhausted - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

EMOTIONAL SELF-CARE (FEELING YOUR FEELINGS)

REAL MOM STORY

Tasha had not cried in two years. She was too busy holding everyone else together. When her therapist asked how she was feeling, she said 'fine' automatically. She was not fine. She was buried under unprocessed grief, anger, and sadness. She had forgotten she was allowed to feel.

THE LESSON

Mothers are expected to be emotionally stable at all times: patient, calm, nurturing, never angry, never sad. This expectation is impossible and harmful.

You are allowed to feel angry at your kids and still love them fiercely. You are allowed to grieve your pre-mom identity. You are allowed to feel overwhelmed, resentful, or sad. Feelings are not actions.

Emotional self-care means: creating space to feel your feelings without judgment, having someone safe to talk to, processing grief and anger instead of stuffing them down, and forgiving yourself for being human.

Ways to process emotions: journaling (even 3 sentences), crying (in the shower, in the car, anywhere), talking to a therapist, voice memos to yourself, creative expression (painting, writing, singing).

Emotional Self-Care (Feeling Your Feelings) - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Write for 5 minutes without stopping about how you REALLY feel today
2. Allow yourself to cry the next time you feel it coming instead of pushing it down
3. Name 5 feelings you are carrying right now without trying to fix any of them

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

Complete this sentence honestly: 'The feeling I most avoid is _____ because...'

Emotional Self-Care (Feeling Your Feelings) - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

SOCIAL SELF-CARE (FRIENDSHIP MAINTENANCE)

REAL MOM STORY

Before kids, Danielle had a vibrant social life. Now she could not remember the last time she talked to a friend about something other than parenting. Her friendships had withered from neglect, and she felt profoundly lonely even surrounded by her family all day.

THE LESSON

Motherhood can be isolating even when you are never alone. Being surrounded by tiny humans who need you is different from being seen, heard, and known by peers.

Friendship in the mom years requires intentionality because it will never happen spontaneously. You have to schedule it, protect it, and accept that it will look different than before kids.

Lower the bar for friendship connection: a 5-minute voice memo counts. A funny meme shared counts. A walk with strollers counts. It does not have to be dinner and drinks to matter.

Find your people: mom groups (even online), neighbors with kids, old friends who get it, new connections who make you feel like yourself (not just 'someone's mom').

Social Self-Care (Friendship Maintenance) - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Text one friend right now with something real (not just logistics)
2. Schedule one friend date this month and protect it like a doctor appointment
3. Join one online or in-person mom group this week

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

Who makes you feel most like YOURSELF? When did you last connect with that person?

Social Self-Care (Friendship Maintenance) - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

SPIRITUAL SELF-CARE

REAL MOM STORY

Rachel used to pray daily, attend services, and feel deeply connected to something larger than herself. After kids, that practice disappeared. She missed it desperately but could not find the time or energy. She learned to find spiritual moments in the ordinary chaos of motherhood.

THE LESSON

Spiritual self-care is about connecting to something bigger than yourself and your to-do list. This looks different for everyone: prayer, meditation, nature, music, community, gratitude, or wonder.

You do not need an hour of silent meditation to be spiritual. You can pray while folding laundry. You can feel wonder watching your child discover a ladybug. You can find peace in three deep breaths.

Gratitude is one of the most accessible spiritual practices. Even on terrible days, naming three good things rewires your brain toward hope. It does not minimize the hard stuff; it coexists with it.

Create micro-rituals: morning prayer while coffee brews, gratitude journal at bedtime, one worship song during commute, mindful breathing at red lights, Sunday rest that is actually restful.

Spiritual Self-Care - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Write 3 things you are grateful for right now (even tiny things)
2. Find 2 minutes of silence today and just BE (no agenda)
3. What spiritual practice did you love pre-kids? How can you adapt it for this season?

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What makes you feel connected to something bigger than yourself and your daily routine?

Spiritual Self-Care - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

SETTING BOUNDARIES WITH FAMILY

REAL MOM STORY

Anna's mother-in-law showed up unannounced every Sunday. Her sister called daily with drama. Her husband expected dinner on the table at six. Anna felt like everyone had unlimited access to her time and energy, and there was nothing left for herself. She needed boundaries.

THE LESSON

Boundaries are not selfish. They are necessary for survival. Without them, you will burn out, resent everyone, and eventually explode or shut down. Neither option serves your family.

Boundary scripts: 'I need 30 minutes alone when I get home before I can be available.' 'We need to schedule visits in advance.' 'I cannot take on that responsibility right now.' 'I love you AND I need space.'

Common boundaries moms need: protected alone time, say over household visitors and timing, division of labor that is actually fair, space to have feelings without fixing everyone else's, authority over parenting decisions.

People who benefit from you having no boundaries will push back when you set them. This resistance does not mean your boundary is wrong. It means it was needed. Stay firm, stay kind, stay consistent.

Setting Boundaries With Family - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Identify one boundary you desperately need and write it as a clear statement
2. Practice saying your boundary out loud (mirror, friend, therapist) before saying it live
3. Write down what happens when you do NOT have this boundary - use that as motivation

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What boundary would change your life the most? What is stopping you from setting it?

Setting Boundaries With Family - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

ASKING FOR HELP (SCRIPTS INCLUDED)

REAL MOM STORY

Jen prided herself on doing everything herself. Then she got the flu and the house fell apart in 48 hours. She realized: she was a single point of failure. If she went down, everything went down. She was not strong for refusing help. She was fragile for depending on no one.

THE LESSON

Asking for help is not weakness. It is wisdom. It takes more courage to be vulnerable and say 'I need support' than to silently struggle and pretend everything is fine.

Scripts for asking: 'Could you handle bedtime tonight? I am running on empty.' 'I need help with [specific task]. Could you take that on this week?' 'I am not okay. I need you to listen without trying to fix it.' 'Can you watch the kids for one hour Saturday? I need time alone.'

Be specific. 'I need help' is hard for people to act on. 'Can you pick up groceries on your way home?' is easy. The more specific your request, the more likely you are to get what you need.

Build your village: who can do school pickup? Who can you call in an emergency? Who can babysit? Having a list of people you can call makes you less likely to suffer in silence.

Asking for Help (Scripts Included) - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Ask for one specific thing from your partner today (no apologizing)
2. Make a list of 5 people who could help and what they could realistically do
3. Practice this sentence: 'I need _____. Can you help with that?'

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What is the hardest part of asking for help? Where did you learn that needing help was shameful?

Asking for Help (Scripts Included) - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

COUPLES TIME AFTER KIDS

REAL MOM STORY

Mike and Theresa had not been on a date in 14 months. They communicated through logistics: who is picking up whom, what needs to be bought, whose turn is bedtime. They were excellent co-managers but barely recognized each other as partners anymore.

THE LESSON

Your romantic relationship needs maintenance just like your car. You can ignore it for a while, but eventually things start breaking down and repairs become expensive.

Couples time does not require a babysitter and a restaurant. It can be: 20 minutes of phone-free conversation after kids sleep, a weekly 'couch date' with snacks and a show together, cooking together, a morning coffee ritual before kids wake.

Reconnection starts with turning toward each other instead of away. Notice your partner. Ask a real question. Share something from your inner world. Make eye contact. Touch that is not a request for anything else.

If your relationship feels disconnected: acknowledge it without blame ('We have drifted and I miss us'), schedule intentional time (even 15 minutes counts), get curious about each other again (ask questions like when you first dated).

Couples Time After Kids - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Schedule 20 minutes of phone-free conversation with your partner this week
2. Ask your partner one question you do not already know the answer to
3. Write down three things you appreciate about them and share the list

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What did your relationship feel like before kids? What do you miss most?

Couples Time After Kids - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

CAREER IDENTITY BEYOND MOTHERHOOD

REAL MOM STORY

When people asked Alicia what she did, she said 'just a mom.' That word 'just' haunted her. Before kids, she was a project manager, a creative problem solver, a professional with ambitions. Was that person gone? Could she find her again? Did she want to?

THE LESSON

You are allowed to love your career. You are allowed to miss your career. You are allowed to want to be both an excellent mother and an excellent professional. These desires do not conflict.

Motherhood can make you BETTER at your career: you develop patience, multitasking, crisis management, empathy, efficiency, and leadership skills that are invaluable professionally.

If you are home: your worth is not measured by a paycheck. But if you miss professional identity, explore: freelancing, volunteering, continued education, passion projects, eventual return-to-work plans.

If you are working: refuse the guilt. Your children benefit from seeing you use your gifts, pursue your dreams, and model that women can be multi-dimensional. You are not choosing career OVER kids.

Career Identity Beyond Motherhood - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Write your bio without mentioning motherhood. Who else are you?
2. Identify one professional goal you can work toward in this season
3. Create a plan for developing one skill this month (even just reading about it)

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

Who were you before you became 'Mom'? Which parts of her do you want to invite back?

Career Identity Beyond Motherhood - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

MANAGING RAGE / TOUCHED OUT

REAL MOM STORY

Patricia screamed at her three-year-old for spilling milk and then sobbed in the pantry for ten minutes. She was horrified at herself. She was not an angry person. But the constant demands, constant touching, and constant noise had pushed her past her breaking point.

THE LESSON

Mom rage is real, it is common, and it is a signal that you are depleted beyond your capacity. It is not a character flaw. It is an alarm bell saying: something needs to change NOW.

Touched out is the feeling of not wanting ANYONE to touch you. After being crawled on, nursed on, clung to, and grabbed all day, human touch feels like sensory overload. This is a real neurological response, not a rejection of your family.

When rage builds: remove yourself if possible (bathroom, porch, car), press ice to your wrists or face (activates the dive reflex and calms your nervous system), count backward from 10, use a 'rage script': 'I am feeling really angry right now. I need a minute.'

Long-term solutions: identify your triggers (usually lack of sleep, food, space, or respect), communicate your needs before you reach the explosion point, get regular alone time (non-negotiable), and consider therapy for the underlying depletion.

Managing Rage / Touched Out - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Identify your top 3 rage triggers and share them with your partner
2. Create a 'rage first aid kit' (ice pack, headphones, mantra card, essential oil)
3. Schedule one hour of alone time this week where no one touches you

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What does your rage actually need? Under the anger, what unmet need is screaming?

Managing Rage / Touched Out - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

SLEEP WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

REAL MOM STORY

Despite being exhausted beyond measure, Michelle lay awake at night with her mind racing. She worried about everything: was that cough serious, did she sign the permission slip, is her marriage okay, will her child be happy. The cruelest irony of motherhood: too tired to function but too wired to sleep.

THE LESSON

Insomnia in mothers is epidemic. Your nervous system is on high alert 24/7 because you are responsible for keeping small humans alive. Even when your body can rest, your brain often will not.

Sleep hygiene for moms: same bedtime every night (even when you could stay up), no screens in bed (the blue light plus scrolling keeps your brain active), cool dark room, white noise to mask kid sounds that trigger your alert system.

Racing thoughts technique: keep a notepad by your bed. When a thought comes, write it down and tell your brain 'handled, I will deal with it tomorrow.' This externalizes the thought so your brain can let go.

If you cannot sleep: do not fight it. Get up, do something boring in dim light (fold laundry, read something dull), and return to bed when drowsy. Lying in bed frustrated makes insomnia worse.

Sleep When You Can't Sleep - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Set a consistent bedtime for the next 7 days and protect it fiercely
2. Put your phone in another room before bed tonight
3. Try the 4-7-8 breathing technique: inhale 4 seconds, hold 7, exhale 8

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What is keeping you awake at night? Write your worries here to release them from your mind.

Sleep When You Can't Sleep - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

SEASONAL SELF-CARE

REAL MOM STORY

Amanda noticed her self-care needs changed throughout the year. In winter she craved warmth, coziness, and rest. In spring she needed fresh air and new energy. In summer she wanted freedom and fun. In fall she needed organization and comfort.

THE LESSON

Your needs are not static. They change with the seasons, with your children's ages, with hormonal cycles, and with life circumstances. Self-care that works in summer may not work in winter.

Winter self-care: warmth (baths, blankets, tea), light therapy for dark days, cozy rituals, permission to hibernate, nourishing comfort food, candlelight, early bedtimes.

Spring self-care: fresh air and sunshine, decluttering, new beginnings, planting something, opening windows, lighter foods, more movement, social reconnection.

Summer self-care: play and spontaneity, water (swimming, sprinklers, beach), lighter schedules, later bedtimes, adventure, saying yes to fun, outdoor reading.

Fall self-care: nesting and organizing, warm drinks, routine creation, slowing down, gratitude practices, apple picking and pumpkin patches, returning to rhythms.

Seasonal Self-Care - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. What season are you in right now? What does your body crave?
2. Create a self-care menu for your current season (10 small ideas)
3. Notice what you naturally gravitate toward and honor it without judgment

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What season feels hardest for you? What self-care practice could make it more bearable?

Seasonal Self-Care - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

SELF-CARE ON A BUDGET

REAL MOM STORY

Lisa wanted to take care of herself but felt guilty spending money on herself when there were always kid expenses. She thought self-care required spa appointments and expensive products. Then she discovered that the most powerful self-care often costs nothing at all.

THE LESSON

Free self-care: sunshine, walking, library books, deep breathing, calling a friend, napping, journaling, stretching, dancing in your kitchen, long showers, sitting in silence.

Low-cost self-care: face masks from the dollar store, candles from discount shops, secondhand books, free YouTube yoga, community recreation classes, potluck dinners with friends, thrift store 'new outfit' for $5.

Swaps with other moms: trade babysitting, share subscriptions, take turns hosting kid-free time, share self-care supplies, create a mom cooperative.

Reframe: self-care is not about spending money. It is about prioritizing yourself. The most valuable self-care (rest, boundaries, saying no, asking for help) costs absolutely nothing.

Self-Care on a Budget - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Write a list of 10 self-care activities that cost zero dollars
2. Do one free self-care act today and notice how it feels
3. Ask another mom if she would like to swap babysitting hours this month

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

What free activity fills your cup the most? How can you do more of it?

Self-Care on a Budget - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

YOUR PERSONALIZED SELF-CARE PLAN

REAL MOM STORY

This final chapter is entirely yours. You have read about many forms of self-care. Now it is time to create a plan that is realistic, personalized, and sustainable for YOUR life in THIS season. Not someone else's plan. Yours.

THE LESSON

Your self-care plan should cover: daily micro-practices (5 minutes or less), weekly practices (30-60 minutes), monthly practices (a few hours), and seasonal/annual practices (full day or weekend).

Be specific and realistic. 'Take better care of myself' is not a plan. 'Take a 10-minute walk at lunch three times a week' IS a plan. The more specific, the more likely you will follow through.

Build in flexibility. Some weeks you will only manage the 5-minute practices. That is okay. Any self-care is better than none. Progress not perfection. Consistency not intensity.

Accountability: share your plan with someone who will lovingly hold you to it. A partner, friend, therapist, or even writing it on a calendar where you see it daily.

Your Personalized Self-Care Plan - Your Action Plan

PRACTICAL TIPS:

1. Fill out the self-care plan template on the next page
2. Share your plan with one supportive person
3. Start tomorrow with just ONE daily practice and build from there

1-MINUTE EXERCISE:

Close your eyes. Take 3 deep breaths. Ask yourself:
'What do I need right now?' Listen. Honor the answer.

JOURNAL PROMPT:

Write your self-care non-negotiable: the ONE thing you will do for yourself no matter what.

Your Personalized Self-Care Plan - Deep Reflection

MY CURRENT REALITY:

WHAT I WANT TO CHANGE:

MY FIRST STEP THIS WEEK:

MY PERSONALIZED SELF-CARE PLAN

DAILY (5 min or less):

WEEKLY (30-60 min):

MONTHLY (2+ hours):

SEASONAL (full day):

You matter.

Not because of what you do for everyone else.

Because you exist. Because you are YOU.

Take care of her. She deserves it.

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

PERSONAL GROWTH JOURNAL

What resonated with me most:

Actions I will take:

My commitment:

REFLECTION & ACTION STEPS

Key takeaways from this section:

How this applies to my life:

Questions I still have:

MY ACTION PLAN

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

GROWTH JOURNAL

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

MY ACTION PLAN

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

ADDITIONAL THOUGHTS

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

GROWTH JOURNAL

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

MY ACTION PLAN

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

GROWTH JOURNAL

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

DEEPER EXPLORATION

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

MY ACTION PLAN

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

GROWTH JOURNAL

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

MY ACTION PLAN

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections:

GROWTH JOURNAL

Use this space for your thoughts and reflections: